

by Samuel Whidden

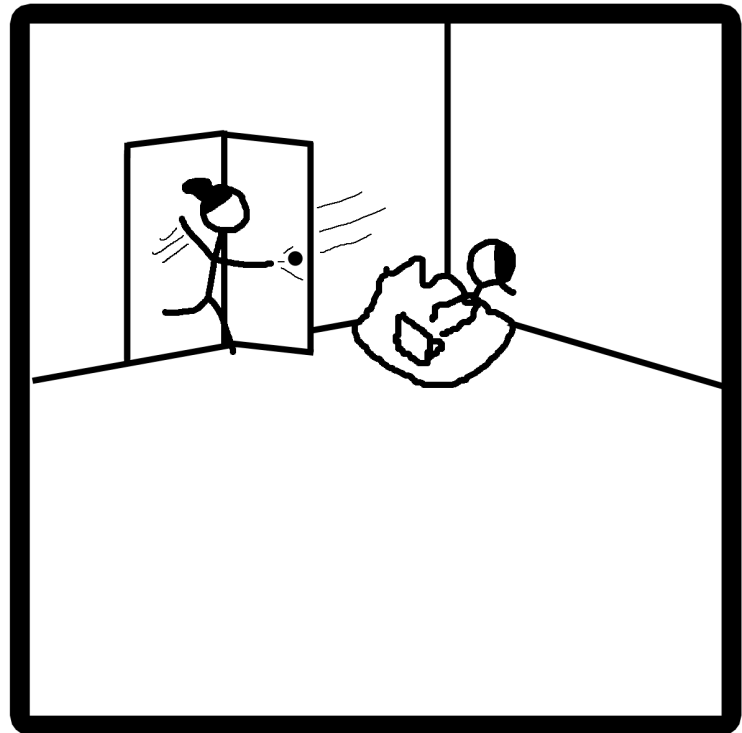

Tucked snugly away in the corner of her room, Tifa is writing a GameBoy emulator in her free time.

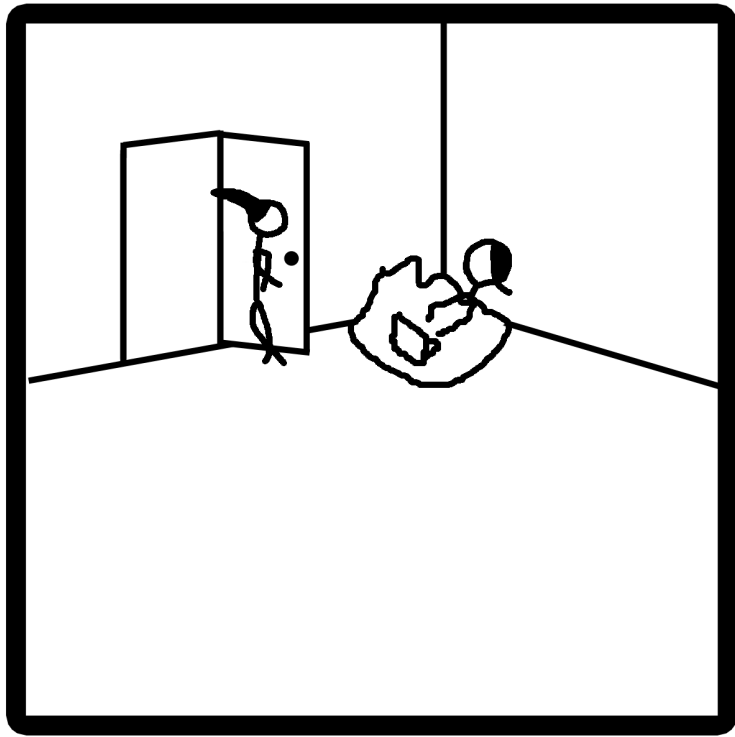

She notices that in order to type anything, she must glance at the keyboard to see the keys before she can hit them.

Even though she greatly enjoys her hobby, she never focused on typing. Her emulator will take forever as it is, but this grievance will only slow her down further.

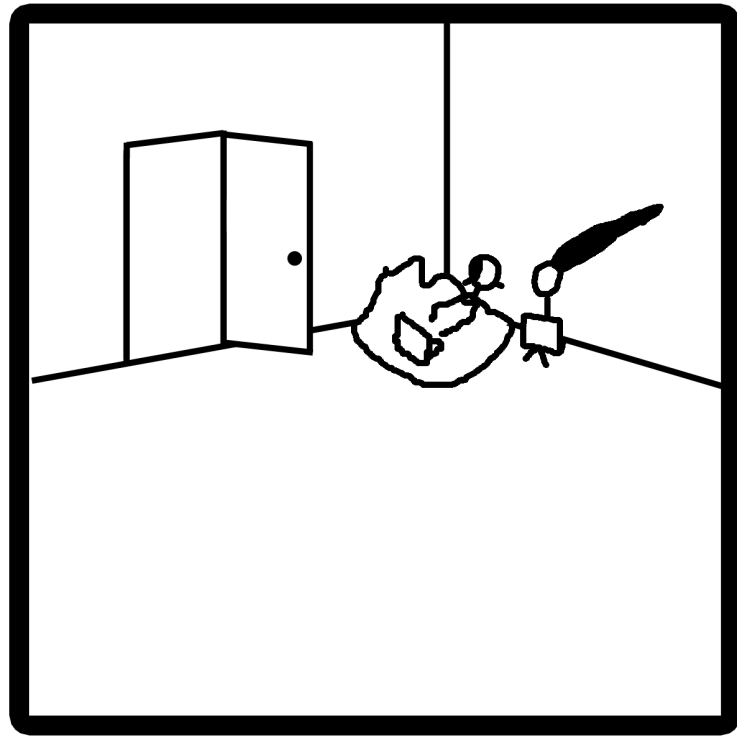

Suddenly, her roommate Zari explodes into the room exclaiming: "Finally! Our woes are over at last!"

"What do you mean?" Tifa asked, "You mean...you really did find one?"

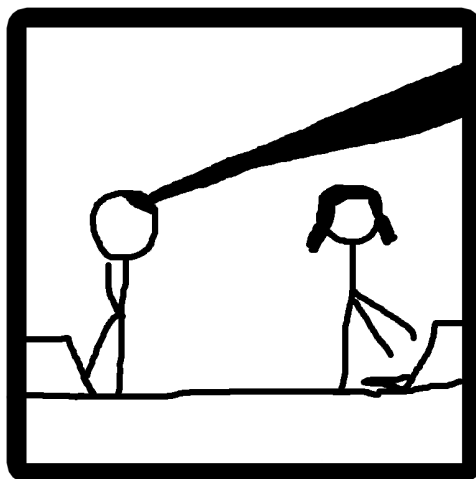

"YES, really and truly! Everything RULES. I found a typing tutor that is not, in fact, lame, but EPIC!"

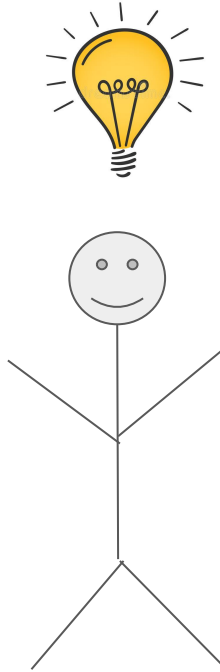

Zari pulled out her laptop and pointed to the website that was already on screen:

"Quicken Chicken: The save-the-chicken Typing Tutor." The sub-header read:

"Type quick, or the chicken gets it!"

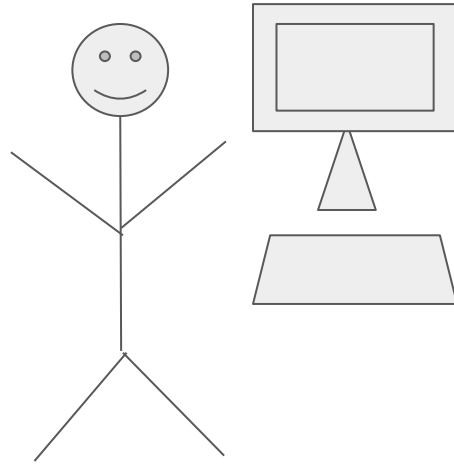

From then on, Tifa and Zari worked through the courses available on Quicken Chicken about 15 minutes every day, and were able to reach typing speeds of over 80 WPM in just a month of practice.

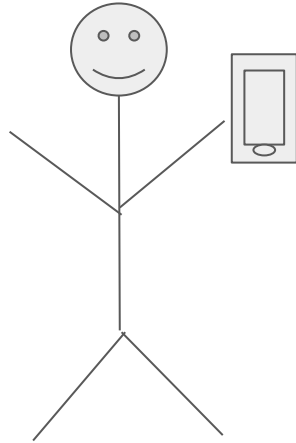

by Ronald Faust

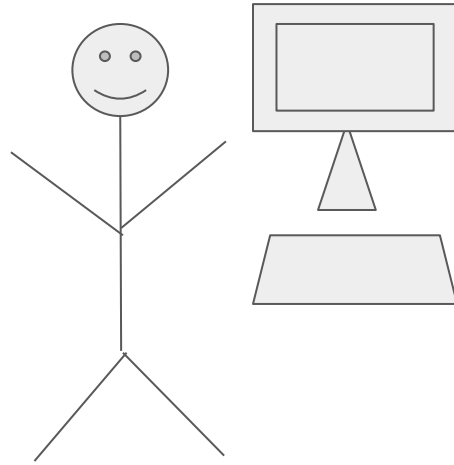

Gregory was going about his day when he had a good idea for his novel he has been working on.

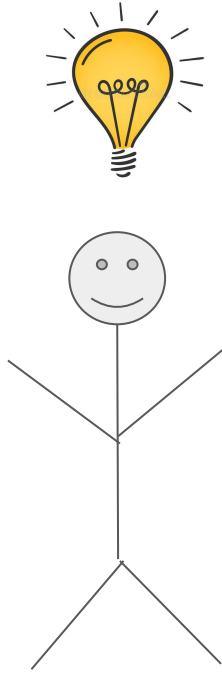

Gregory sat at his computer and began typing, but he was soon frustrated that he could not record his ideas quickly enough. Soon his spectacular novel ideas had faded and only his frustration remained.

Gregory pulled out his phone to search ways to learn how to type faster, understanding that how his poor typing skills could hinder his career going forward.

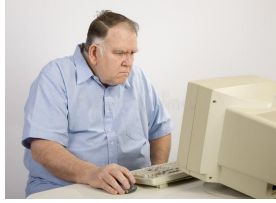

Gregory, after stumbling upon the typing practice application “Quicken Chicken,” hopped back on his computer and began practicing his typing.

A few weeks later, after daily practice on “Quicken Chicken,” Gregory remembered the ideas. He sat down at his computer and began typing and was typing faster than the ideas could come to him.

by Matt Scott

Matt Scott

1) Gary gets aggravated when trying to use his computer and cell phone. He does not like how long it takes him to write his emails and send his text messages. Which is a big deal for him because he lives across the country from his children.

2) One morning Gary is scrolling through facebook and sees an ad for an app called Quicken Chicken, which can improve one's typing in a matter of days just by using the app and practicing.

3) Gary thinks to himself that it could save him so much time if he was more savvy with typing. He downloads the app and begins his typing journey.

2 Weeks Later.....

4) Gary is now blowing up his kids' phones with emails, and text messages. He even learned how to use emojis.

Gary is satisfied!

First Day of School

Jason Bell

PARTY!
PARTY!
PARTY!

Ice
Cream
Party

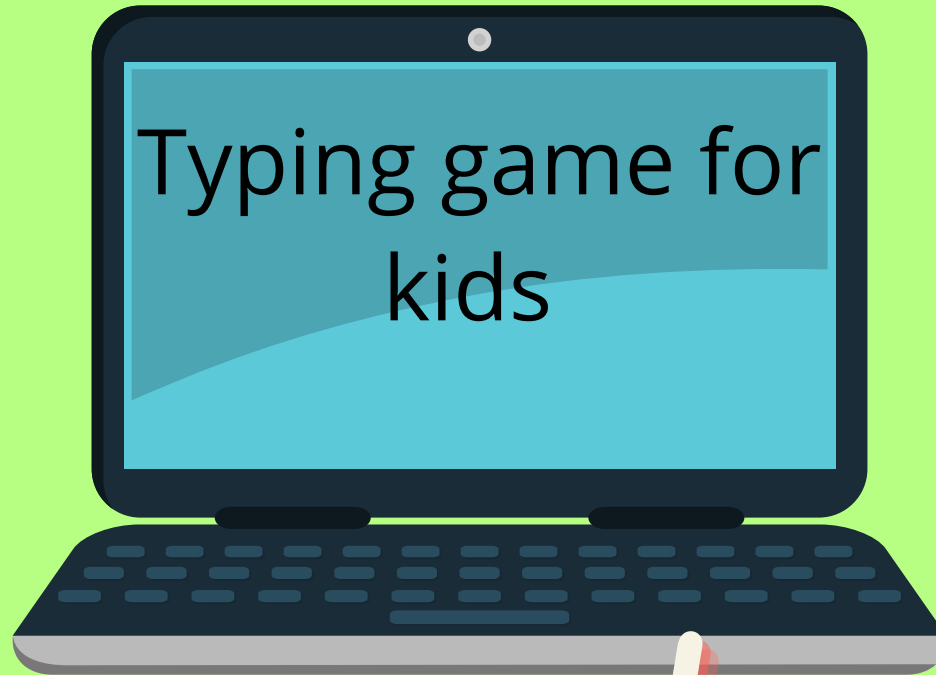

WOW!

I

SUCK

Thank you!

WINNER

